

OUR VALUES

Craft Aid International is founded on Christian principles of love, service and inclusion, and serves people of all faiths and none.

CHANGING ATTITUDES

The first project that our director, Susie Hart, established was called “Neema Crafts Centre”. The word, Neema means “Grace” in Kiswahili. The Christian gospel of God’s grace is at the heart of Craft Aid International’s story. We believe that people with disabilities receive God’s grace to the same extent as everyone else, and along with that gifts, talents, and abilities. All over the world, people with disabilities are still not treated with the dignity and respect they deserve. Our work aims to challenge and overcome false assumptions and the stigma attached to disability.

GIVING HOPE

For many people, whether in the UK or overseas, the experience of living with a disability can be a hugely challenging one. Our therapeutic and employment-generating craft workshops aim to bring people together, combat depression and renew hope.

ENCOURAGING CREATIVITY

We believe that every individual has been gifted with God-given creativity and we want to provide people with disabilities the opportunity to use these gifts. All of our activities promote creativity. We like to use locally-sourced or recycled materials whenever possible.
